

Hockey Women's Junior World Cup Netherlands & Argentina to meet in final

Santiago, Dec 12: In the classification pathway, Austria defeated Namibia and Malaysia advanced from the shoot-out against Zimbabwe to secure the play-off for 21st place.

Scotland overcame New Zealand, also in a shoot-out to reach the final. For 17th place, and Chile closed the day with a 2-0 win over Canada to qualify for the first final of the Challenger Trophy.

The day combined classification matches, position-defining fixtures and the confirmation of the teams that will fight both for the world title and for the specific objectives of each competition segment.

Netherlands vs Belgium (full time score: 0-0, SO: 3-0). The semifinal featured one of their most tactical contests with the match between the Netherlands and Belgium. The two highest-scoring teams of the tournament produced a duel of finely read presses, balanced risks and very narrow margins.

With only eight entries for the Dutch and three for Belgium, the match unfolded through defensive order, midfield battles and limited space in both circles, contradicting pre-match expectations of a more offensive encounter.

Each side attempted two penalty corners without success, while green cards to Sam Luttmner (NED), Ferrine de Clerck and Camille Belis (BEL) reflected competitive intensity more than rough play. With this victory, the Netherlands will play for the title on Saturday, while Belgium, after an excellent tournament, will compete for third place.

Designated Player of the Match, van Heuvel expressed himself as feels incredible, it was such a tough match and Belgium pushed us to the limit, but we stayed calm and studied their shoot-outs well. Saving three makes me very happy. We are a very united team and we want to go as far as possible.

Argentina vs China (full time score: 3-0). Argentina and China contested the second semifinal with a tight first half and limited space inside the circle. The Argentine team managed slightly more possession, recording two circle entries in Q1 and three in Q2, while China responded with two per quarter plus their first penalty corner in the opening minutes.

Argentina earned one penalty corner per quarter, but both defensive units and goalkeepers handled each execution with discipline. The only disciplinary sanction of the first half was a green card to Tan Lei in the 15th minute, a period in which Las Leoncitas could not capitalise on the numerical superiority, and the first 30 minutes ended goalless.

After half-time, Argentina converted territorial control into set-piece effectiveness. A sequence of three consecutive penalty corners at the start of Q3 produced the 1-0, scored by Milagros Alastrera from a penalty corner in the 35th minute.

In the same quarter, Zoe D'az extended the lead to 2-0 in the 44th minute with a precise set-piece to the goalkeeper's right, a well-placed finish that consolidated Argentina's advantage. China attempted to respond in Q4 with a series of penalty corners in the 47th and 48th minutes, but could not break the defensive structure or goalkeeper Mercedes Artola. Late in the match, Alastrera sealed the 3-0 in the 52nd minute with another penalty corner.

With this win, Argentina will seek redemption from the 2023 title match against the Netherlands on Saturday at 19:15 local time.

The Player of the Match was Zoe Diaz, who expressed, "We knew it would be a very difficult match, China are a very strong team. We are very happy with this win, and now we have to keep working because we have a very tough opponent waiting for us in the final."

Quinton, Baartman power SA to 51-run T20 win

New Chandigarh, Dec 12: Quinton de Kock's sublime and Ottneil Baartman's clinical bowling powered South Africa to a commanding 51-run victory over India in the second T20 International at Maharaja Yadavindra Singh International Cricket Stadium on Thursday.

Asked to beat, South Africa's innings was anchored by de Kock, who produced a virtuoso 90 that set the tone for the visitors. De Kock showcased his signature elegance, flicking, pulling, and lofting with supreme control.

A six off Arshdeep Singh in the opening over and another mammoth 93-metre strike off Axar Patel set the stage for an innings that combined timing, placement, and power. Aiden Markram and the dugout frequently acknowledged the captain's authority, as he turned every scoring opportunity into a statement of intent. Dewald Brevis added spice with audacious strokes, including an one-bounce thump over mid-off and a daring loft that rattled Shubman Gill. However, the real crescendo arrived in the final overs when de Kock departed on 90, underlining Varun Chakravarthy to the wicketkeeper. His exit brought a momentary hush, but Donovan Ferreira and David Miller immediately took charge, smashing 53 runs off just 23 balls to carry South Africa past the 200 mark.

While de Kock dictated the batting narrative, Baartman scripted the collapse of India's innings with precision. The right-arm pacer claimed four crucial wickets in the final two overs, including Arshdeep Singh (4), Shivam Dube (1), Varun Chakravarthy (0), and Tilak Varma (62), dismantling India's lower order with a combination of pace, accuracy, and strategic variation.

Baartman's earlier efforts, combined with Lungi Ngidi's (2/26) and Marco Jansen's (2/25) support, ensured that India never recovered from the twin blows of de Kock's incisive bowling and the Proteas' disciplined bowling.

India's chase began with promise through Tilak Varma, who fought valiantly with a 34-ball 62, and contributions from Jitesh Sharma (27 off 17) and Axar Patel (21 off 21). Yet, as Baartman weaved his web in the death overs, even well-timed boundaries were insufficient to counter the mounting pressure. The final wicket, Varma's pull shot to Markram off Ngidi in the final over, symbolised South Africa's dominance and emphatic control.

South Africa's blend of masterful batting from de Kock and ferocious, opportunistic bowling from Baartman exemplified the complete T20 performance. With the series squared 1-1, the Proteas have sent a resounding message ahead of the remaining three games.

Brief scores: South Africa 21/34 de Kock 90, Ferreira 30*, Miller 20*, India 162/10 (Tilak Varma 62, Jitesh Sharma 27, Axar 21, Ottneil Baartman 4/24, Lungi Ngidi 2/26, Jansen 2/2)

Bobbsanter The Music of Surrender..!

It is easy to say, 'surrender to God'. It sounds noble. It sounds spiritual. It sounds like something saints do while glowing softly under a halo of warm light. But let me tell you, surrender is rarely that dramatic. Often it is as simple, and as confusing, as standing in a small church choir wondering why on earth your voice has suddenly decided to go on holiday.

I remember that particular Christmas rehearsal. I had said my prayer at home, told God I was hum. Not a half-hearted attempt. A full throated, confident, pitch perfect burst of melody. For weeks he had barely whispered through rehearsals while I had been cheerfully drowning out half the choir.

And then my voice betrayed me. I stared at the music sheet as if it were written in ancient Egyptian. My mind went blank. My voice went that way, and the two refused to meet. It was like watching a badly dubbed movie.

What I sang sounded nothing like what I intended. The conductor frowned. I frowned back. The soprano looked alarmed. Even the tenors edged away discreetly. Inside me began a frantic conversation. Had I lost my musical sense? Had age finally tiptoed in and stolen my pitch? Was this divine judgment for skipping choir practice the previous week?

And right then, something unusual happened. The man standing next to me began to sing. Really sing. Not a timid hum. Not a half-hearted attempt. A full throated, confident, pitch perfect burst of melody. For weeks he had barely whispered through rehearsals while I had been cheerfully drowning out half the choir.

But today, as I stumbled, he soared. The conductor smiled at him with a pride that warmed the room. Later that evening, the man had been going through deep mental stress, but had still made it for every rehearsal.

Something hit me. It was not humiliation. It was not embarrassment. It was something far bigger. It was a rehearsal after surrendering myself to God. And God, in His quiet way, had used that surrender to lift someone else up who had been faithful to Him, despite his problems.

Suddenly surrender no longer felt like a personal devotional act. It felt like a connection. A thread in a tapestry far larger than I could ever see. A reminder that God is not just my God. He is the God of all. And in surrender, I stop being the centre of my story. I become part of His story. Have you faced moments like that after surrendering to Him? Moments where things did not go as planned and yet something beautiful came out of it? Then smile, because it means God has quietly placed you in a bigger part than yourself. You played your part. You were used. And that is the real music of surrender..! bobsbant@gmail.com

Sarthak & Syndrela cap stellar season with titles

Ranchi, Dec 12: Odisha's emerging talent, Sarthak Arya, once again displayed his grit and finesse, defeating West Bengal's Rupam Sardar 3-1 to capture the Under-17 Boys' title at the fifth UTT National Ranking Table Tennis Championships on Thursday at the Harivansh Tana Bhagat Indoor Stadium here.

This triumph adds yet another feather to Sarthak's cap, following his earlier U-17 title victory this season at Panchkula. In the Girls' final, Syndrela Das produced a commanding performance, sweeping past Avisha Karmakar 3-0 in a gripping match that offered her opponent little chance to respond.

For Avisha, it was her first final appearance in recent times, but she fell short of clinching the crown. For Syndrela, the victory was a fitting conclusion to the season-morning her title-winning start at Vadodra earlier in the year.

Sarthak took firm control early in the boys' final, racing to a 2-0 lead before Rupam fought back to grab the third game. Rupam even came close to levelling the match, but after missing a few match points, Sarthak regained momentum and sealed the win to cap off a successful season with his second major U-17 national ranking title.

The road to the finals of the Boys and Girls categories turned into a thrilling test of nerves and skill as the semifinals delivered intense rallies, bold comebacks, and flashes of brilliance from some of the country's brightest young paddlers.

The Boys' U-17 division saw a display of grit and composure as Sarthak and Rupam booked their victories in the title clash places in the final hand-fought semifinal before Sarthak sealed the contest 3-1, surviving a tense four game where every point felt like a mini-battle. On another battle, Rupam showcased tactical brilliance to subdue PSBA's Trishal Raj Kumar 3-1. After dropping the opening game, Rupam found his rhythm, using sharp angles and consistent forehands to dictate play. Before that, one witnessed a gripping set of quarterfinals where endurance and mental strength defined the outcomes.

Sarthak and Atharva both registered 3-1 wins over their respective rivals-Akshay Bhushan and Ronald Sarkar-while Rupam and Trishal had to dig deep in five-game thrillers to edge Sahil Rawat and Aditya Das, respectively.

In the Girls' U-17 category, Syndrela and Avisha continued their dominant run, storming into the finals with confident wins in their semifinal openings. Syndrela looked sharp and assured in her 11-6, 11-9, 7-11, 11-5 victory over Tanishka Kalbhairav of Karnataka, the girl who won the Under-15 crown a day before. Though Tanishka clawed back a game, Syndrela's precision on the returns and ability to control tempo proved decisive.

Avisha, meanwhile, combined aggression and finesse to outplay Divyanshi Bhownick of Maharashtra 3-1. Her shot placement and consistency on the backhand flank made the difference as Avisha sealed her berth in the final in style.
